PREFACE

The British Library contains a magnificent collection of North American materials which are distributed throughout the Library. The David and Mary Eccles Centre for American Studies, which was established in 1991, has as one of its main aims the identification and increased exploitation of these materials.

To this end the Centre will be publishing a series of Guides which fall into two categories. The first will consist of detailed surveys of materials in the Library relating to an aspect of North America. The second will be shorter and more general, intended to introduce a wider public, including the younger scholar, to research on selected topics.

Both sets of Guides will be widely circulated to major libraries and institutions of secondary, further and higher education. It is hoped that the Eccles Centre and its Guides will help sustain and develop interest in North American relations in an era of rapid change.

Those wishing to acquire a personal copy of a Guide will be able to apply directly to the Centre.

INTRODUCTION

The European continent has recently undergone a period of change unprecedented since World War II. In Eastern Europe both the republics comprising the Commonwealth of Independent States, and the nation states once dominated by the Soviet Union, are taking their first tentative steps towards the establishment of democratic government and participation in a free market economy. In Western Europe the changes have not required the loss of lives, yet they too have exposed old tensions and rivalries, as the members of the Economic Community attempt to move towards greater political and economic union.

In light of these events, critics on both sides of the Atlantic have been reassessing the political, economic, and strategic relations between the United States and Western Europe. For fifty years the United States has played a central role in determining the defence policies of Western Europe, and the two regions have been firmly connected economically. However, the end of the Cold War has brought the US military involvement under scrutiny, whilst "Europe 1992" and the new ties between Eastern and Western Europe, have raised many questions about the economic implications of these changes for the United States.

This bibliography is intended as a resource for scholars, students and general readers interested in both the recent developments in UK-US-West European relations, and the critiques and commentaries on the future of this relationship. For those who are familiar with the recent publications the bibliography will serve as a guide to the materials held in the British Library's collections at Bloomsbury, the National Newspaper Library at Colindale, and the Document Supply Centre at Boston Spa, Yorkshire. For those who are less familiar with the field the bibliography will provide an overview of the subject area.

With regard to the selection of the materials, it was decided that works that clearly included the United Kingdom in their treatment of western Europe would be listed, while those that focused almost exclusively on the relationship between other European nations and the United States would be omitted. The bibliography is divided according to types of materials: monographs; articles; conference proceedings; reports; and official publications of the United Kingdom and the United States. All of these materials are in English. The quantity of newspaper articles on this subject rendered their inclusion impossible. However, a list of the National Newspaper Library's current holdings, as well as the indexes and online services available there has been included.

The entries in this bibliography include their location and identifying code. The monographs, which are all held at Bloomsbury, include their shelf-mark. The periodical articles have been assigned a code which indicates their location at either Bloomsbury, the Document Supply Centre or Colindale. At the end of the periodicals chapter is a list of the shelf-marks of the Bloomsbury holdings. The Document Supply Centre shelf-mark is given for conference proceedings and reports held at Boston Spa. The official publications may be consulted at Bloomsbury in the Official Publications and Social Sciences Service Reading Room. The United Kingdom materials are generally held on the open shelves, while those of the United States are available on microfiche.

BOOKS

The entries in this category are listed under the subject headings "Political Relations", "Economic Relations" and "Strategic Relations". The shelf-marks for those items currently held at Bloomsbury are given in parentheses at the end of each entry. Those items without shelf-marks were being acquired when this bibliography went to press. Readers, are advised to check the online catalogue.

NEXIS is a vast and complex database of over 10 million news stories, nearly all in full text, drawn from some 350 sources including newspapers, news wires and periodicals. Although it includes some British newspapers (Daily Telegraph, Financial Times, Independent and Times) its emphasis is very much on US material and it is unlikely to provide access to British data which could not be retrieved by other means.

TEXTLINE

Textline is part of the Reuters organization. It is primarily an abstracting rather than full text service and its emphasis is on financial and business news. It covers a very wide range of UK and foreign newspapers and periodicals, including a large number of UK provincial papers, which are not indexed by any other online database.
